Turks Pass Budget and Chamber Is Then Prorogued FRENCH COMPELLED

(Special to The Monitor.) CONSTANTINOPLE-The budget has been passed by the Chamber, and the Chamber has in turn been prorogued. In the budget the ordinary expenditure is set down as £T32,997,000, the extraordinary expenditure at £T2,696,000, revenue, £T26,015,000; leaving a deficit of £T9,678,000, which is brought up to over £T10,500,000 by special credit for the pension fund, the payment of debts incurred by Abdul Hamid, and indemnities to officials. It is considered, however, that the deficit will be reduced to something like £T5,000,000, owing to the expected increase of £T1,500,000 in the revenue, while about £T2,000,000 of expenditure will remain undisbursed, in addition to which there is a reserve of £T2,000,000 from last year.

In the debate at the prorogation, Hakki Pasha delivered a speech of considerable length and importance. The grand vizier dealt at length with the various points of home and foreign policy, and, in referring in particular to the situation in Crete declared, not only that the question, owing to the attitude of the powers, was nearer a settlement than it had been for many months, but that the accusations of unfriendliness on the part of England which had found their way into the papers; were ridiculously untrue, and were sufficiently disproved by the recent utterances of Sir Edward Gray in the House of Commons. This declaration was received with loud applause. Following this, the speaker turned to review the internal condition of the empire. Yemen, he declared, had been quieted owing to the introduction of reforms. Albanian revolt had been suppressed, and the pacification of the country was being steadily continued. while the difficulties which had sprung up with the tribes in the neighborhood of Bagdad were being steadily overcome. After a speech from Ahmed Riza Pasha, who outlined the various measures which had been brought before Parliament, the Chamber was prorogued until the first of November next.

Arrangents are now being perfected in England to send a strong team to this country to play at the Point Judith Polo Club tournament at Narragansett Pier, R. I., during August. The Britishers will also take part in any subsequent tournaments that are open to them, and in addition the Meadow Brook Club will, in all probability, arrange a special series of matches with the visiting

THOUSANDS OF EDUCATORS LEAVE AFTER CONVENTION THAT BROUGHT BIG BENEFITS

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, the new president of the association and superintendent of the public schools of Chicago, commenting on the weeks work said that much had been done to clarify the situation regarding manual training versus industrial education. The place of each in the schools is better understood. The relative value of both compared with other branches of education has been thoroughly thrashed out The aim and direction to be taken in the field of moral training is clearer because of this year's meeting, said Mrs.

She spoke in high terms of the work Secretary Says Meeting of former President James Y. Joyner as a presiding officer, praising his fairskill and tact especially during the trying meeting in the Old South church Thursday when the officers for the ensuing year were elected,

Mrs. Young reiterated many of the statements she made at Tremont Temple Friday evening relative to the feeling of democracy that, has developed during the convention and said that one of the objects to be sought by her during the coming year would be to develop new interest in the association throughout the great body of teachers of the country.

Mrs. Young left Boston for her he e Chicago early this afternoon.

Former President Lauds Hospitality of Bay State

Former President James Y. Joyner of the association expressed much satisfaction at the outcome of the convention. "Whatever of good has come from the meeting must be largely attributed to local committee and to the generous hospitality shown by the people of the bay state to all its guests. The hospitality was magnificent." Mr. Joyner modestly said that he did not wish to speak of what had been accomplished during the week. He had been instrumental in preparing the program for the convention and he thought any criticism of the work done should come from others. Stratton D. Brooks, superintendent of the public schools of Boston, said that the chief impression made by the contier's birthplace, about three miles away, vention was that education is a bigger and to reach it they passed Lake Kenoza. and more important subject than most the open country, farms with their stone people think. "There are several reasons for the smaller attendance. The last local convention came only seven years ago; the special railroad rates for the convention were made late and with but small reductions; there are many flourishing summer schools throughout the West which are largely attended and which kept thousands of students and teachers from coming East."

Large Party Uses the Day to Visit at Whittier Home

HAVERHILL .-- A special train arrived ere this morning with a large number of members of the National Education Association and others intent on a pilgrimage to Whittier land, under the auspices of the Old South Historical Society of Boston, which has conducted the splendid arrangements made by the similar excursions for 15 years. When the education association held its last convention in Boston in 1903 a similar excursion was conducted by this society.

The members of the party felt that the trip was essential to a perfect understanding of the New England spirit breathed through the poems of Whittier. The members of the Whittier Home Association and the Elizabeth II. Whittier Club cooperated with the society in giving the excursion.

Upon the arrival of the train the party boarded special electric cars for Whitwalls and the distant woods, which served to recall poems of Whittier. At the birthplace, which has been re stored to its original appearance, the guests were permitted to ramble over the old place, the old-fashioned rooms, the whitewashed walls, the crane at the open fireplace, etc., all arousing great interest among the party. Through the windows were visible the pasture and the nearby

Complete Stocks Throughout the Year Is a Fixed Policy of this Establishment-the Summer Months of Julyand August Being No Exception

NE of the primal factors in the leadership of this great organization is told in the headlines of this advertisement—a buying-helpfulness recognized and appreciated by tens of thousands of purchasers throughout New England. It is a policy to be doubly emphasized, as it particularly identifies this house from practically all the other stores, it being the general custom to reduce assortments to such low levels, prior to stock taking, that satisfactory selection is quite out of the question.

HERE stocks are being replenished constantly. HERE new merchandise immediately fills the gaps and inroads of each previous busy day's selling. HERE midsummer shopping means the same satisfactory and easy selection that characterizes New England's Foremost Store at other seasons of the year

This fact, and the two equally important facts that only merchandise of thorough reliability is carried here and that prices at all times are guaranteed to be as low as, or lower than found elsewhere in New England for goods of like quality, make this establishment

INAUGURATE WOMAN PRESIDENT OF N.E.A. AS BIG SESSION ENDS

The presidency of the National Educa tion Association, which has just closed its six-day convention, was formally passed at the final general session Friday night to Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools of Chicago, the forty-ninth and the first woman president of the association, amid the plaudits of 3000 teachers of all degrees.

Mrs. Young was cheered when she took her place on the platform and was roundly applauded after her salutatory address. The first part of the exercises was in charge of James Y. Joyner of Raleigh, N. Mr. Joyner made a felicitous speech expressing his appreciation and gratitude for the cooperation of the members during-his year of service. He also thanked the people of Boston for the fine hospitality and courtesy they showed the members. He went on to say, "It becomes my pleasant duty to present to you the woman whom you have selected trust in ner head also." as president. She is worthy to preside over any body of teachers, the most eminent woman, perhaps, in the profession of teaching today, Mrs. Ella Flagg Everybody stood and the many hundreds of women in the audience waved their handkerchiefs as Mrs. Young came to the front.

"It is," said Mrs. Young, "with a dee, sense of the honor you have conferred upon me and of the responsibility I assume in attempting to be president of this association that I accept the position to which you have elected me. ## THE ETTRICK SHEPHERD, JAMES HOGG

IN THREE PAPERS.

THERE has been some confusion as to the date of James Hogg's birthit was probably in 1770-but none as to the spot, which was a little clay bigging, with a but and a ben, and a roof thatched with heather. The cottage stood near the headwaters of the Ettrick river in the borderland of Scotland, and in the district known as the Middle March or Ettrick forest.

In the time of the Stuarts Ettrick forest was a natural wood, full or deer and a very old ballad runs:

"Ettrick forest is a fair forest; In its growth many a seemlie tree; There are hart and hind and dae and rac.

And of a' wild beastes great plentie." In the eighteenth century the forest had mostly vanished and hill and vale were in use for tillage and pasture. Here, in the Yarrow country which Wordsworth made famous, and in the very heart of what Ruskin called "the singing country," most of the shepherd's life was passed.

Before he was 6 he went to school for half a year, learning his letters and a little reading from the "Westminster Shorter Catechism," then used as a primer in the rural schools of Scotland. At seven, owing to the failure of his father as a sheep farmer, the family was reduced almost to beggary and little ceiving for six months wages a ewe lamb and a pair of shoes. Then another six months under a teacher, during Bible, but not to write, and his schooling was finished. A Weak Opening Is Followed by Good Buying and Covering of Shorts Helps Send Prices Upward.

BOSTON IS ACTIVE

Encouraged by their success in the late trading yesterday afternoon the bears made another attack upon the New York stock market today. The unfavorable crop report issued by the government yesterday afternoon was the effective argument employed. The open ing was weak and the first sales showed material losses throughout the list. The Boston market sympathized with the Wall street prices and slumped off substantially during the first sales.

Almost immediately after the opening there was a quick recovery, Good buying orders were at hand. South Weymouth organization formed some twenty years ago.

DROBABLY there is no social club on the South shore better known than the Norfolk Club of South Weymouth. This club was organized about 20 years ago, but it was not until April 6, 1898, that it was incorporated.

The club was started for the encouragement of athletics, a more intimate knowledge of public affairs and to afford a place where members could find comfort and enjoyment during leisure hours. The incorporators were George L. Wentworth, Frederick T. Hunt, Charles H. Clapp, Edward B. Nevin, Allen B. Vining, C. F. Elwell, Benjamin W. Tirrell, J. H. Elwell and L. O. Crocker. The first officers were: President, George L. Wentworth; secretary, Frederick T. Hunt; treasurer, C. F. Elwell.

Today it has a membership of 140, which includes leading business and professional men in the town, as well as many clerks and mechanics.

The quarters in the Fogg building have parlors, billiard and pool rooms on the street floor and a bowling alley on the lower floor.

Beginning in October, there is something going on nearly every night. Whist and bridge parties are held, there are pool and billiard tournaments, bowling contests between teams of club members and teams from adjoining First president of Norfolk Club of South towns, smoke talks, and once a month there are addresses on public questions by well-known public men.

It is said that this fact so mortified Verrocchio that he gave up painting and took to sculpture.

Not finding sufficient scope for his talents at Florence, Leonardo offered his services to the Duke of Milan, Ludovic Sforza. The letter which he wrote to the duke enumerating his various qualifications is one of the most remarkable documents on record; it is now in the Ambrosian library at Milan, and like all Leonardo's manuscripts is written from right to left. Ludovic was then contemplating the erection of an equestrian statue in honor of Duke Francis Sforzathe founder of the dynasty-and having made up his mind to achieve something superlative, he summoned Leonardo to his court as being the most talented artist of the day. For 16 years Leonardo worked in the service of the Duke of Milan, and the result of his labors during this period is pitifully unsatisfactory The best years of his life seem to have been almost wasted when we think of the tragic fate that befel his two masterpieces. #### CAP CHASE.

TWO lines are drawn or staked off upon the ground 65 paces apart. At a distance of 25 paces from one and 40 paces from the other a stake is driven, upon which is hung a cap. One boy is selected to act as umpire, while the others, the more the merrier, choose sides and line up facing one another from the outer marks. Those nearest the stake are the reds and those farthest away the blues.

At a signal from the umpire one red makes a dash for the cap on the stake, and one blue advances at full speed to capture him. The former has to advance 25 paces to the stake, seize the cap and return with it behind his own line. The latter has 40 paces to make before reaching the stake, but as he has not to stop and turn, they are about evenly matched.

If a blue succeeds in placing his hand upon the shoulder of a red before the latter has crossed his own line, he takes him back a prisoner and it counts one for the blues, If he fails he drops out of the game and the reds count one. After all have tried the side having the greatest number of points wins the game.

DUBLIN, Ire. When the Municipal Gallery of Modern Art was founded in Dublin it was described by the well known art critic, D. S. M'Coll, as "the first real attempt at a representative collection of modern art to be found in the British Isles."

The foundation of such a gallery is the result of an awakening of public taste and interest. #### TECHNIC OF DIALOGUE.

The technic of playwriting is so intricate that very few writers succeed in mastering it. Indeed, there are many plays that reach the stage that are carried by the force of the ideas they present, and they succeed in spite of crude construction. All over the country there are thousands of persons writing compositions which have not the slightest esemblance to drama, except that they are cast in the form of dialogue.

Drama primarily means "something ione," and secondarily something said about that which is done. Moreover, what is said must be based upon what is done within the view of the audience. This is what the inexpert writer does not understand. He writes only for the ear, and the eye of the auditor is not interested. As an instance of the expert's appeal to the mind of the auditor through the ear and eye at the same time and with equal power, consider this bit of dialogue from William Gillette's "Clarice," It is the sort of thing that is one of the "secrets' of playwriting, and until it is mastered F. # WABAN, NEWTON

Have you any idea what a beautiful section of Greater Boston it is? I have sold upwards of 560,000 feet of land since Jan. 1, 1909, in this part of Newton, to people who are buying for homes. Don't make the mistake which so many have already made of buying too near a large city. It is far better to get where the land is properly restricted and where the apartment house will not drive you out just as you are getting settled. For appointments, telephone 3307 Main or 258-2 Newton South.

The Clerical Question in Spain

THE action of the Spanish bishops, reported by the Vatican, in opposing the religious reforms introduced by Senor Canalejas to the Spanish Cortes, with the consent of the King, is foreing the clerical question rapidly to the front as a commanding political issue. The reforms proposed by the premier were so just and so necessary, and are supported by such a great weight of public opinion, that not only has the cabinet received the support of the King, but it is believed that the support of Senor Maura and the Conservative party will not be lacking to it. In these circumstances the hostility of the clerical powers is the more regrettable and incomprehensible, and it has found its natural corollary in the decision of the Republican party to initiate a great agitation throughout the country.

The reforms aimed at would appear to the ordinary persons to be quite outside the realm of contention. They consist of two perfectly simple provisions. The first would give permission to the dissenting bodies in the country to display their insignia outside the buildings in which their services are held. This is a privilege accorded to Catholics themselves in all countries, and the attempt to withhold it from the dissenting bodies in Spain is evidence of intolerance of a remarkable description. The second provision is one which it might be deemed was as necessary to the well-being of the Catholic church in Spain as to that of the state itself. It proposes to reduce the religious orders and congregations, wherever this can be effected without harm, and to subject them to the ordinary law regulating the right of associations, without in any way infringing their freedom in spiritual matters. These reforms are themselves so natural and so moderate that it might have been imagined they would have been agreed to without demur. The agitation, however, raised by the bishops, as well as the implied threat of the Vatican to break off negotiations with the government, have proved to the country that what is aimed at is something more than the claims which are commonly put forward in support of a state church, and amount, not merely to religious and political domination, but to the practical suppression of every other phase of

The result of this has been somewhat curious. It has brought the Republican party into a working alliance with the monarchial Liberals, and the leaders of that party, Senor Perez Galdos and Senor Lerroux, have expressed their contentment with the program of Senor Canalejas, in spite of their fundamental difference of opinion on the subject of the constitution of the state authority. The fact is that the supporters of clerical domination in Spain are at the parting of the ways. They see the new spirit which is growing up all over the country, and in that new spirit they see, or think they see, the curtailment of their own privileges. The consequence is that they are afraid to give way in any single particular, lest it should prove the destruction of the foundation of the whole system.

It is a position which can only be equaled by the famous apothegm of Talleyrand with respect to the Bourbons.

No pourt the firemen are thoroughly convinced that the new style "safe and sane" Fourth of July celebration is a great improvement over the old-fashioned observance of the day.

President Taft's Land Withdrawals

WITHDRAWALS of land from the public domain under the Taft administration promise to be sweeping enough to satisfy the most extreme conservationist. With a few strokes of his pen at Beverly on Thurs-day night the chief magistrate made effective orders withdrawing from either exploitation or development 35,073,164 acres of coal lands in North and South Dakota, Washington, Utah, Colorado and the territory of Arizona. A portion of this land had been held tentatively in reservation under the previous administration, but the greater part of it has been set aside under orders prepared since Mr. Taft became President.

This action, taken in connection with the President's consistent course in relation to conservation of national resources, should be sufficient to assure those who have entertained doubts that in this regard at least no backward step will be taken under the present administration. The next point of moment to be settled is that which has reference to the ultimate policy of the nation toward the lands thus removed from settlement and development. It is inevitable that there shall be a demand for these lands, and the manner in which this demand shall be met and satisfied will determine whether the present policy is wise.

Gifford Pinchot is right in declaring that the power that holds within its grip control of the national resources of any country is in the last analysis the sovereign power. It will not do, however, for the national government merely to fasten its grip upon the natural resources. It will have to make laws under which these resources shall be properly developed, and in a manner advantageous to the

SINCE it is now proposed to bring the aeroplane under the operation of the interstate commerce law, this type of aircraft can no longer be deemed "an impractical toy."

The Business Situation

ALTHOUGH the usual midsummer quietness prevails in many lines of business, and notwithstanding the fact that other departments of trade have undergone a temporary reaction, commercial activity as a whole is of good proportions. Those who have been on the losing side of the stock market since the slump began some six months ago are inclined to take a pessimistic view of conditions. But there is no warrant for this.

Because there has been a depreciation of considerably over a billion dollars in the prices of Wall street securities since the first of the year is no reason for thinking that there is anything serious overhanging the business of the country. Many and various are the reasons given for this remarkable shrinkage in values. The national administration gets the most blame. Its "interference with corporate rights" is held most largely accountable for the recent depression in stock prices. But it is doubtless due to corporate greed that public sentiment has been roused against some of the larger corporations of the country as it has been. The present agitation is certain to result in a better understanding between the public and the corporations, and both will be benefited in the proportion that harmonious relations are entertained.

The depreciation in the prices of securities can be most largely attributed to the fact that a readjustment of values has been impera-Following the unprecedented industrial expansion which occurred almost immediately after the panic of 1907 it is natural that there should be some reaction in business as well as security prices. Expenses of all kinds increased abnormally. The cost of living became so high that the buying power of the average man was reduced to an unusually low level. He did not have the money to buy stocks. And it has been this lack of buying power of the public which accounts for the continued decline in prices of securities. Corporations and individuals are now engaged in curtailing expenses in order to make ends meet. It is a hopeful sign. It means cheaper foodstuffs and cheaper living for all. It means that we are getting back to normal conditions. The price pendulum always swings too far one way or too far the other way before it comes within a reasonable range. There are now good indications that the usual conditions will soon obtain. Good crops will be a big help in this direction. The exercise of patience and good sense will be of inestimable value in bringing about a state of affairs that always · should prevail.

AT THE rate at which ex-President Roosevelt's date book is filling up for the coming autumn, he may find it necessary to give extra matinee speeches in some parts of the country in order to supply the demand on his time.

Great Park Project in St. Louis

THIRTY-ODD years ago when Forest park was created in St. Louis complaint was made by residents that it was too far removed from the center of population ever to be of real value to the people. The hundreds of thousands of strangers who visited the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, which found a site in that immense pleasure ground, could see that St. Louis had grown out to it and far beyond it. Last year the Missouri Legislature passed an enabling act for the creation of a public reservation district which, if accepted by the people of St. Louis and of St. Louis county at the election of November 8 next, will provide for a system of parks and boulevards extending from a point on the Missouri river on the north to a point on the Mississippi river on the south, embracing in its curving sweep the beautiful Creve Coeur lake and a long stretch of the charmingly romantic Meramec river. The topography of the district is such that the skill of the landscape gardener is not necessary, and yet it is intended to expend an immense sum of money in the laying out of driveways and rambles, and in the construction of bridges.

The area of this park will be vastly greater, of course, than that embraced in the famous Middlesex Fells of Boston's suburbs, but the project will be one having in view the same noble purposes that inspired the preservation of that picturesque tract and its perpetual dedication to the uses of the public.

Only one other outer park enterprise comparable in extent with that which St. Louis has taken in hand is now under contemplation in the United States. This is the outer park and boulevard belt designed to extend around Chicago from a point on the north to a point on the south shore of Lake Michigan, embracing not only the city and its environs but all suburbs within a radius of over twenty miles

Ordinary prudence dictates that the great cities of this country waste no time in the matter of making ample park reservations. They are all growing at a tremendous pace, and if the beauty spots in their vicinity are to be conserved, and if extensive tracts are to be secured, now is the time, before land values increase to the prohibitive point.

Now that more than 75,000 garment makers are on strike in New York, we may expect to see, ere long, a fashion item to the effect that garments will be worn longer-(one season longer)this year than heretofore.

THE bureau of navigation reports the building in this country, during the fiscal year just ended, of 1502 merchant vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 347,025, as against 1362 vessels of 232,816 tons for the preceding fiscal year. This showing is referred to in the despatches as "a marked increase over the previous year," as well it might, without being at all flattering to our national pride.

Construction The only important ocean-going vessel of steel construction launched during the year was the Wilhelmina, built at Newport News, and the only wooden vessel of extraordinary consequence was the schooner Wyoming, built at Bath, Me. The former is a vessel of 6975 tons; the latter is of 3707 tons and is 300 feet in length. During the calendar year of 1909 only one other sailing vessel exceeding 1000 tons was launched in the United States. We have not all the figures at hand for the last fiscal year, but in the previous year shipbuilding on the Great lakes contributed very largely to prevent the showing from being positively shameful. That year the Great lakes turned out fifteen steamers of over 5000 tons each, the largest being the Shenango, built by the Great Lakes Engineering Works of Detroit, Mich. This was a vessel of 8407 tons. This year's report shows that fifteen ocean steamers were built. A comparison of our shipbuilding with that of recent past years is meaningless. If we make comparisons with former years of home construction at all we should go back to the fifties. In that decade we had reached a point where 65 per cent of American commerce was carried in American bottoms; now less than 8 per cent of American commerce is being carried in American vessels. Our merchant vessel tonnage is, as a matter of fact, 200,000 less than it was when the nation was an infant, a hundred years ago. England and Germany are so far ahead of us in merchant shipbuilding now that even under a dreaded subsidy system it would take years for us to make a respectable showing beside either of them.

American

There may be much room for argument concerning the methods to be applied in order that our merchant marine may be restored, but there can be no argument with regard to this. It is in sore need of restoration.

It is in no way surprising that Russia and Japan should come to some sort of an understanding by which, so far as regards their mutual attitude, they should be left free to pursue their interests in the far east. It is not surprising that they should make this arrangement without consulting the other powers, on a matter that ostensibly concerns only the contracting parties. And lastly, it is not surprising that such an arrangement should have for its purpose results that are not particularly beneficial to the United States; but we must remember that at this writing all this is matter of rumor. It would be unwise to form any pronounced opinion on statements based on what is only hearsay, but the rumor itself is an indication of possibilities that have always existed and which it is our business to keep in mind. At all events, there need be no uncertainty in our minds, if there be even a rumor that the policy of the open door for which John Hay contended with such success is about to be imperiled. This policy of equal opportunity in China for all nations was recognized in the treaty signed by Russia and Japan at Portsmouth on Sept. 5, 1905, and this treaty with its stipulation as to China was in turn recognized in the convention entered into between Russia and Japan on July 30, 1907. Apparently China desires to act in a manner friendly to the United States, but its hands, to a great extent, are tied by its position; it stands between Russia and Japan, as signatory powers, and Great Britain as the ally of Japan on one hand, and the United States on the other.

It is at a moment like this that public opinion should show most caution and its expression become most dispassionate, for the reason that the interests of the United States far outweigh those of any European power. When the Marquis of Lansdowne, as foreign minister of Great Britain, concluded that alliance with Japan, which is now well known, it is to be presumed that he was guided by the policy of checkmating Russia. England's attitude toward Russia had not then changed from its tradition of suspicion of the northern empire, and the northwestern frontiers of India were frequent subjects of diplomatic thought. Since that day Russia has been greatly weakened within and without, and this cause for solicitude being diminished its place has been taken by the activities of the German empire and its manifestly growing power. Whether today Great Britain is quite satisfied with her alliance in the east may be a matter of some doubt, for with all respect for the susceptibilities of the Japanese, the alliance, based like most, on self-interest, arouses sentiments such as were felt in Europe in the sixteenth century when Francis I. made his famous alliance with the Porte. This instinctive political theory has been expressed by that acute ruler, the German Emperor, though without any intended reference to the alliance in question. But so far as formal agreement of parchment and seal goes, Great Britain is today the ally in greater or less measure of the Mikado and his people.

We are to bear these facts in mind when we reflect that at a distance of 10,000 miles lies our great dependency called the Philippine islands. It would be a piece of political pedantry to discuss at this juncture whether we were justified in taking possession of these islands and retaining them; the fact to remember is that we do possess them, and that they can become the symbol of our retention or relinquishment of a diplomatic standing that we have assumed among the nations. We are again to reflect that the right of the open door is no mere figure of speech, but that our right to it in China and Manchuria is of a nature so well based on common fairness that its denial would be cause for the gravest anxiety. We are as well to reflect that we have a sea coast, none too well protected, with a littoral of thousands of miles, and that four days' steaming from this coast is our other possession, Honolulu. It would be extravagant to say that either Russia or Japan was a power that allowed altruism to cumber its policies, yet it may be advanced that compared with other great powers, America's principal dependence must be placed on the altruism of others. In the pursuit of a reasonable patriotism is it wise that we persist in a state of unpreparedness that makes us a contrast to every state in the old

It has always been the practise of this paper to speak for peace and to discourage war, and always will be, but at the same time it must be admitted that to prevent conflict is better than to invite it and has more of kindness in it than a passive adherence to theories of peace that are constantly upset. Not to protect a right is to countenance a wrong, and we least of all can have excuse for it, in that we seek on every hand to enjoy the fruits of what can be based on right alone. If it is our wish to frame a career as a great insular power, that though recognized shall live to itself, we must give up our part in world affairs. But if we seek to play a part and have a respected position on the world's wide stage, we must accept their responsibilities and cheerfully furnish those safeguards which at present we cannot be without, if we would not reduce the world's hard-earned advance to chaos.

IT has been pointed out by educators attending the teachers' convention in this city that the study of Latin must be made more interesting in order to have it more popular with grammar and high school pupils. The same thing may be said of other studies. As things are now, many boys prefer baseball or the old swimming hole to arithmetic or grammar.

THE proposition to hold an airship meeting in Boston this summer will no doubt meet with hearty approval on the part of the public, inasmuch as all that portion of the show that rises above the skyline of the Harvard stadium, from which enclosure the ships will make their flights, will be open and free to all.

THE Manchurian "open door" is not to be slammed shut with a bang, but it appears as if it is being softly but effectually closed, with a Japanese statesman standing on one side of it and a Russian diplomat standing on the other and each holding a duplicate key to the situation.

THE airship trip that Walter Wellman and Melvin Vaniman are planning to make across the Atlantic this summer is to start from the vicinity of New York and will terminate-well, that will be determined later on.

THE mile-high altitude achievement by aeroplane is being earnestly sought by aviators in all corners of the earth. After its attainment the "bird-men" can go after the two-mile prize, and so on and on.
